

To your benefit. Worldwide.

Registration of Translation Services.

The quality standards for translators have been further developed at international level. The DIN EN 15038 Industry Standard, which was valid until recently, was replaced in May 2016 by the DIN EN ISO 17100 International Standard. Translation service providers can have their services registered for recognition at DIN CERTCO with the DIN EN ISO Association Mark. This involves the making of an independently submitted translator's declaration of conformity with the standard.

The mark shows the difference.

Looking back on the previous DIN EN 15038, requirements, processes and skills from the following fields are addressed or defined in more detail for the first time:

- Personnel and technical resources
- Quality and project management
- Contractual framework
- Work processes and additional services offered

The international DIN EN ISO 17100 standard is aimed at translation service providers and their clients, but, as was also the case with the previous DIN EN 15038 standard, may not be used by interpreters.

The aim of the DIN EN ISO is to create transparency when rendering translation services and thus to offer support both for the Client and Contractor. Using the standard as a basis for the contract is a matter for the contracting parties concerned.

How to register

Any translation service provider, which offers its services as per DIN EN ISO 17100 and in so doing complies with the requirements of this standard, can be registered.

Interested service providers should submit their registration application to DIN CERTCO and also provide a conformity declaration. The service provider then receives notification of registration and a registration number as well as the right to use the association mark, which it may use in conjunction with the registration number that has been received to identify its translation services.

Openness and transparency

All DIN EN ISO association mark registered translation service providers can be looked up on the DIN CERTCO homepage at any time. All of the documents relating to the registration can be viewed here.

Validity.

The registration is valid for an unlimited period, provided that the service provider observes the conditions of registration.

There are lots of good reasons for a DIN registration.

- Translation services in conformity with standards
- Clear differentiation in the competitive environment
- Confidence of the market and people thanks to a mark which visibly makes a difference
- A decision-making and guideline for your clients in a complex market
- The registration provides a benchmark for your claims on providing high quality
